Animals That Glow

What Does Glow Mean?

Some amazing creatures can make their own light. This special ability is called bioluminescence. It means the animal produces light, often to help them see in the dark or communicate with others.

Why Do Animals Glow?

Animals glow for many important reasons. Some use their light to find food, like anglerfish in the deep ocean that use a glowing lure. Others glow to attract mates, like fireflies flashing signals to each other on warm summer nights. Glowing can also help scare away predators.

Animals That Glow

There are many fascinating animals that can glow! Fireflies are a well-known example, lighting up backyards. In the deep parts of the ocean, many different types of fish, jellyfish, and squid use their glowing abilities to survive and thrive.
